

The Ninth Circuit rejected a comic creator's $60-million lawsuit against NBC Universal and the producers of the television series Heroes, determining there was no evidence of copyright infringement. Jazan Wild (aka Jason Barnes) sued the network and Tim Kring's Tailwind Productions in May 2010, accusing them of stealing the "carnival of lost souls and outcasts" depicted [...]

Read more: <http://robot6.comicbookresources.com/2013/03/appeals-court-rejects-artists-lawsuit-against-nbcs-heroes/>