

Chicago Public Schools have been told to disregard an earlier order to remove Marjane Satrapi's acclaimed 2000 graphic novel Persepolis. Instead, the Chicago Tribune reports, CEO Barbara Byrd-Bennett has asked that the autobiography no longer be taught to seventh-graders. It will, however, remain in libraries. Word of the initial order spread quickly following the removal [...]

Read more: <http://robot6.comicbookresources.com/2013/03/chicago-public-schools-told-not-to-remove-persepolis/>