

Business | In a surprise announcement, Kevin Tsujihara was announced Monday to succeed Barry Meyer as CEO of Warner Bros. Entertainment, the parent company of DC Entertainment. The 48-year-old Tsujihara, who has been with Warner Bros. since 1994, was named in 2005 as president of the Home Entertainment Group, overseeing the company's home video, digital [...]

Read more: <http://robot6.comicbookresources.com/2013/01/comics-a-m-warner-bros-entertainment-names-new-ceo/>