

“[T]hey broke my spirit,” Don Rosa wrote in an epilogue to his autobiography in comics, explaining why he retired from the job he so dearly loved. The whole tale is heart-breaking but also beautiful in the cartoonist’s abundant gratitude and humility. “They” of course are Disney and its publishing licensees who don’t pay their comics [...]

Read more: <http://robot6.comicbookresources.com/2013/02/disneys-shame-and-why-creator-owned-comics-arent-always-the-answer/>