

A Jerusalem retailer has reached a settlement with Marvel and Warner Bros. regarding the sale of unlicensed yarmulkes featuring Spider-Man and Superman. The Jewish Telegraphic Agency reports that Kippa Man owner Avi Binyamin agreed to pay each company $17.000 for infringing on their trademarks; they'd originally sought $27,000 in damages. Binyamin told The Jerusalem Post [...]

Read more: <http://robot6.comicbookresources.com/2013/03/jerusalem-store-settles-lawsuits-over-superhero-yarmulkes/>