

San Diego City Council decided Tuesday it won't appeal a court ruling that struck down the hotel tax devised to fund most of the planned $520 million expansion of the San Diego Convention Center. That leaves the financing "up in the air," council President Todd Gloria told City News Service after the unanimous vote. "It [...]"

Read more: <http://robot6.comicbookresources.com/2014/08/sd-convention-center-expansion-goes-back-to-drawing-board/>