

Sometimes, you see the announcement of a project that, although you are quasi-convinced that it's likely to end in tears, you can't help yourself but be grateful for it happening in the first place, and also hoping against hope that it succeeds against the odds. To wit: The news that Titan Publishing is launching a new line of creator-owned comics aimed at the American Direct Market but created by British creators.

Read more: <http://robot6.comicbookresources.com/2013/01/the-middle-ground-135-standing-on-the-shoulders-of-titans/>