

"Best Of"s are always a problem for me; I get plagued by the knowledge that I know that I'm going to forget something really important - The list of important things that I've forgotten in my life is both embarrassingly long and just plain embarrassing, trust me - as well as the fact that I've just not managed to read all the good stuff released this year. How can I claim that something is one of the Best 10 Whatever's of the year if there's another something I suspect may be even better, if only I could finally get around to making time for it?

Read more: <http://robot6.comicbookresources.com/2011/12/the-middle-ground-83-five-of-my-favorites/>