

Aliye's death, and its echoes, had been stilled by the greater horror of this mother's death, which burned inside him like a smothered coal in the silence there. But Aliye had started dying from the moment his mother told him that they were not to marry, in spite of the bey's gracious visit, in spite [...]

Read more: <http://goodcomics.comicbookresources.com/2012/10/18/what-i-bought-17-october-2012/>