

Read more: http://www.comicbookmovie.com/fansites/joshw24/news/?a=28288&t=An_In-Depth_Interview_With_Michael_Fassbender_On_Magneto

On What Drew Him To Play A Character Like Magneto: "Hopefully I won't disappoint the fan base out there, because I know that what Ian McKellen did sort of latched onto a lot of imaginations and was very successful. But what drew me was the script and Matthew Vaughn and the fact that James McAvoy was going to be playing young Xavier. I thought it was a fresh take on the whole story. I've never been a big comic book enthusiast, but I thought it was an interesting concept to go back to when they were both friends and initially came together." On Whether He Was Given A Pile Of Comic Books For Research: "Yes, it did, and I got knee-deep into them once I got involved. That was all my source material, because it's all there in the comic books in terms of a backstory and formulating the character. I did also watch