

Read more: http://www.comicbookmovie.com/fansites/THURSDAY17/news/?a=27915&t=ANIL_RICKLYs_GREEN_HORNET_REVIEW

Anil Rickly's GREEN HORNET review Seth Rogen and Evan Goldberg decided to take the reins where Stephen Chow left off, and with the likes of Jet Li, Jake Gyllenhaal, Nick Cage, Mark Wahlberg and Kevin Smith all once associated with the project, cynicism did set in as to if Seth and Evan's screenplay could hit the right notes. Michael Gondry returned to helm the director's role once Chow left the pivotal focal point of the film and it's admirable to say that he doesn't flounder, which also applies to the screenplay...it works nicely to give a fun, exciting, action-filled ride - chock full of humor and gut-punching moments! The end result is a typical popcorn flick, that seems fit for a warm summer in my opinion - and the trip's filled with kicks, laughs, explosions...and surprisingly, romance that goes awry! It isn't the upper-tier type film that leaves you gasping for breath with