

Read more: http://www.comicbookmovie.com/fansites/MarvelFreshman/news/?a=28358&t=iCaptain_Americai_Movie_Super_Bowl_Ad_Among_Others_Confirmed

While it's been long-believed, especially from the rumored list of trailer dates, The Hollywood Reporter has confirmed that superbowl spots for Captain America: The First Avenger, as well other Paramount pictures are guaranteed. "Paramount will have the biggest studio presence during the Feb. 6 telecast, buying ad time to plug four films -- J.J. Abrams' alien-invasion pic Super 8, the threequel Transformers: Dark of the Moon and Marvel's superhero pics Thor and Captain America: The First Avenger. All are high-priority "event" movies for the studio." "Disney has bought time during the game for Pirates of the Caribbean: On Stranger Tides, while Universal and DreamWorks' will plug the Daniel Craig-Harrison Ford sci-fi western Cowboys & Aliens." While teaser trailers for all the films listed above, sans Captain America: The First Avenger, have been unveiled, the ad for the Joe Johnston-directed film would provide the first look. Anyhow, what do you think?