

Thanks to Bleeding Cool, we have some more details about the relaunched DC Universe. As you can see from the information below, some of the titles being released this September won't be complete reboots while others will. Even more surprising is the news that a handful of comic books will actually be set in the past, exploring the pasts of both the Justice League and Superman. Most of the released solicitation images for the DC Relaunch are not the covers for the first issue – so look forward to all those being announced soon as well. Action Comics and Justice League are set in the past, the Green Lantern, Batman and LSH books are all continuing without a reboot. DCU Presents, Green Arrow and Hawkman are picking up where Brightest Day left off. But for everything else, yes, it will be more of a reboot/restart. They are basically keeping the books going that
