

Reports DEADLINE: David O Russell is no longer developing Uncharted: Drake's Fortune. He's stepped out of the project. Since getting the Oscar accolades on The Fighter, Russell has been juggling a number of projects. Sony Pictures is getting a new writer to redraft a picture the studio is still keen to make. Russell of course gained negativity in the masses from fans after deciding to make the popular video game following a treasure hunter Nathan Drake into more of a family oriented story. With Russell's exit, does that mean planned star and friend Mark Wahlberg may be stepping down too? Who knows really, I will just be crossing my fingers for a big hell yes and hope Nathan Fillion is cast instead. Powered By Vistaprint
