

With the lack of promotion, you may've forgotten that Ghost Rider: Spirit Of Vengeance, sequel to the 2007 Nicolas Cage-starrer, was in the making, slated for release next year. Though nothing major, nor surprising, the official Twitter profile for the sequel's duo directors Mark Neveldine and Brian Taylor, recently tweeted the following: So, following today's confirmation of Marc Webb's The Amazing Spider-Man having a slot, and undoubtedly Marvel's The Avengers among others, save anticipation for the Ghost Rider revision sequel at San Diego Comic-Con convention next month! Ghost Rider: Spirit Of Vengeance picks up where it's been several years since making a deal with the Devil and Johnny Blaze, living in self-imposed isolation, finds himself as the only person who can help save 10-year-old Danny – and ultimately the world – thanks to his unwanted and uncontrollable power – his ability to transform into the hell-on-wheels monster 'Ghost Rider'. Starring Nicolas Cage, Idris

Read more: http://www.comicbookmovie.com/fansites/MarvelFreshman/news/?a=38624&:t=iGhost_Rider_Spirit_Of_Vengeance Presence Confirmed For Comic-Con