

Read more: http://www.comicbookmovie.com/fansites/MarvelFreshman/news/?a=28532&t=James_McAvoy_Speaks_on_His_Take_as_Charles_Xavier_in_iX-Men_First_Classi

The folks at Screen Rant managed to score an interview with Scottish actor James McAvoy, whose taking over as Charles Xavier in Matthew Vaughn's X-Men: First Class prequel. In the Q & A, McAvoy speaks out on different character traits and story arc for his take on the character, aptly played by the great Patrick Stewart in the X-Men trilogy. One thing people are wondering about is how Professor X is going to be depicted in terms of combat – because he trained for it in the comics. "He's not too combat savvy in this film, it has to be said. He doesn't do too much, he's sort of a consultant with the combat guys. But he does get involved in a few little bits of fisticuffs, I wouldn't say that he comes out well in any of them, but I wouldn't say that he gets his ass kicked either. Yeah he's not