

Marvel Studios' crossover phenomenon The Avengers is becoming closer to actuality with director Joss Whedon issuing a statement via Whedonesque, addressing, confirming, and alerting fans that principal photography begins tomorrow. Hi Pumpkins, joss here. Tomorrow we start shooting (I THINK I'm legally permitted to say that). Day one. That's right. We'll be shooting the pivotal death/betrayal/product placement/setting up the sequel/coming out scene, at the following address: [Marvel Lawyers rush in, take Joss's keyboard, blowtorch a picture of his family like in "Stormy Monday", drink his milkshake, leave the seat up, fluff his pillows, violently unfluff his pillows, leave] Went too far. My bad. Anyhoo, it should be a fun day, followed by the eighty thousand other fun days it will take to finish this. I'll be checking in from time to time, if there's news or I crave attention (i.e. am awake) . None of it will be Avengers news -- I have some

Read more: http://www.comicbookmovie.com/fansites/MarvelFreshman/news/?a=35838&t=Joss_Whedon_Addresses_Filming_For_iThe_Avengersi_Starting_Officially_Tomorrow