

Entertainment Weekly caught up with Mark Ruffalo to talk about his new movie Sympathy For Delicious. He was also asked some questions about his up coming portrayal of Bruce Banner/The Hulk in Marvel's The Avengers. On when he stars on the Avengers: I actually start the day Sympathy For Delicious (April 29th) opens. On his preparation for the role: I've been working with (director/co-writer) Joss Whedon quite a bit on developing it, my portion of it. I'll be working with Robert Downey, and I'm already doing the motion capture stuff. I'm excited. On performing as both The Hulk and Bruce Banner: I'm the first actor to do both. It's really cool. I was surprised by how well my theater training played into the motion capture thing, because it's all your imagination. When he moves across the ground, I want him using all fours, using his arms as much as his legs to move from here to

Read more: http://www.comicbookmovie.com/fansites/JakeLester/news/?a=36177&t=Mark\_Ruffalo\_Says\_The\_Hulk\_Looks\_Just\_Like\_Him\_Only\_Bloated\_And\_Green