

Superman: The Motion Picture Anthology (1978-2006) hits Blu-ray and DVD today and to mark the occasion, MTV sat down with the director of Superman: The Movie and the follow up in the form of a director's cut. Richard Donner gives his opinion on various aspects of the character and his time working on the films, but I chose a couple of excerpts that deal with his views on Zack Snyder's upcoming reboot of the franchise, Superman : Man Of Steel.. MTV: Well, one of the things that makes "Superman II" notable is that it featured the debut of Zod, who was so popular that he made the rare leap from the screen to comics. Now that we know he's also going to be in the new "Superman: Man of steel" reboot movie that's coming up, do you feel some pride in seeing the character continue on and have such a legacy? DONNER: No, not
