

Read more: http://www.comicbookmovie.com/fansites/thegopherhole/news/?a=27869&t=ISpawnI_Could_be_the_IJawsI_of_Superhero_Movies

In an Interview with Geoff Boucher At the LA Times's Hero Complex, The comic icon discusses his past success, and hopes for his Spawn movie. GB: The success went well beyond comics, too, with television, toys and film. Are there any new adaptation efforts in the pipeline? TM: One of the things that happened is after the first movie came out I started the toy company and sort of got distracted. But these days, as you might imagine, with the [Hollywood] success of Batman and Spider-Man and some of the Marvel titles, everybody's on a comic-book buying binge and the phone constantly rings. My attitude toward it is I can't get my head wrapped around some big special-effects movie with a supervillain in there. There will be plenty of those and they've done pretty well. I've always seen Spawn as being cut from a different cloth. It's more of an urban, psychological