

Firstly, here are the excerpts from Chicago Business' report on the news that Zack Snyder's Superman: The Man of Steel is set to film the Smallville based scenes there, and possibly more.

Superman is coming to Chicago this summer, a huge boost for the city's hopes to be a moviemaking superpower. Filming of Warner Bros. Pictures' next Superman movie will take place in the Chicago area over two or three months starting in August, industry sources tell Crain's, with production centered in far west suburban Plano. "It would be a tremendous windfall for us," says Richard Moskal, director of the Chicago Film Office. He can't confirm Warner Bros.' plans but says such a film "showcases a city well to audiences and draws the attention of other producers." While the plot and other details of 'Superman: Man of Steel' have been kept super-secret, the first in a refreshed series would logically focus on Superman's

Read more: http://www.comicbookmovie.com/fansites/joshw24/news/?a=33912&t=iSuperman_Heading_To_Chicago_iTDKRi_Story_Line_Evolving_Beyond_Gotham